

YOUR COURT REPORTER SHOULD LOOK LIKE THIS:

NOT THIS!

There is nothing evolutionary or revolutionary about paying an unskilled, poorly trained person minimum wage to push “record.” They then send that audio on to a transcriptionist who will type your transcript letter by letter from a QWERTY keyboard – a process which is significantly slower than hiring a stenographer who is trained and certified to write 225+ words per minute and able to produce realtime, expedited transcripts, and rough drafts.

There are situations that come up at every deposition – overlapping speakers, paper shuffling, unexpected and sporadic noises, off-the-record discussions, et cetera – all of which are handled professionally on the spot by a stenographer, but would most certainly interfere with a digital recording and confuse a transcriptionist.

Stenographers go through rigorous, intensive, and extensive training, not only to learn how to write extremely fast and accurately, but also how to properly punctuate, format, and produce a certified legal transcript.

Digital recording is NOT cheaper. It is simply paying the same amount to a national corporation for unskilled button-pushers and overworked transcriptionists.
